

The mission of the Catholic Church is to serve God. All members of a church are important in fulfilling the mission. However, priests, sisters, deacons, and brothers are especially important. They lead the church by expressing God's word and teaching the other members of the church how to live like God wants them to live.

Priests do a lot for our church community. One of their biggest responsibilities is to officiate mass and preach the word of God. They teach their parishioners about God through the readings and the homily. They also help by offering advice to parishioners in need. People will go speak to the priest privately for advice on their problems. In addition, priests volunteer at food kitchens to help the hungry and poor. When a young person hears a calling to become a priest, deacon, sister, or brother, the parish priest mentors him or her.

Sisters are important to the mission of the church because they provide aid to the less fortunate and the homeless. Sisters may volunteer in hospitals, nursing homes, and food kitchens. Sisters may provide nursing to an individual in hospice. They also serve their fellow sisters. Sister will travel all over to provide service to those in need.

Deacons have heard a call to serve God. However, unlike Priests, Sisters, and Brothers, they can marry before becoming a deacon. Deacons help fulfill the mission of the church by assisting the local pastor. During mass, a deacon may preach the Gospel or notify. Deacons further support the mission by visiting the sick, counseling church members, and teaching the faith.

Brothers are important to the mission of the church. Brothers have been called by God to serve others. They have taken a vow of poverty. They go to food kitchens and serve food. They also help the elderly. They may also provide assistance to their fellow brothers.

it takes everyone to fulfill the mission of the church. Everybody is important but Priests, Sisters, Deacons, and Brothers are especially important. They are the people that make the church tick. They serve others, not themselves.
